with a participant of the film project 2011

The film project called “One Day on Earth” is a feature film created in collaboration with many UN partners and an online community of media creators who filmed in every country in the world on the same day in October 2010 (10/10/10). People in every country were asked to document the world around them in one day. The film documents the incredible diversity that defines our unique cultures and the common threads that connect us all, visualizing the joys and struggles of everyday life. The organisers of the project aim to screen the film in every country in the world on the same day — on Earth Day, 22 April 2012. Schikaneder-Kino will be the host for the film screening in Austria.
