Tatjana, a young, beautiful peasant girl from a South-Eastern European country, dreams of becoming a ballet dancer. She falls in love with a boy the same age, Vasa, who fled his home, after witnessing the execution of his parents during the civil war. He lives now alone in the woods. Tatjana's father Rade is a drunkard, who dreams of making big money one day with a tourist restaurant. He does not want to know anything about Tatjana's dreams of becoming a ballet dancer. Meanwhile human traffickers are trying to traffic the prettiest girls from the area to anonymous clients in distant cities.
