UN: Footprints for Hope

Ordinary Things? Discovering the Holocaust through historical artefacts

www.un.org/en/holocaustremembrance/EM/educational_footprints.shtml

The Footprints for Hope project aims to further students' understanding of the Holocaust and encourage respect for human rights and the dignity and worth of every person.

Educational materials include a lesson plan, a power point presentation and a film that centre around one of the most painful graphic images from the Holocaust, the shoes of the victims who perished in Nazi death camps. The learning activity has two important elements- students explore the history of the Holocaust through a meaningful discussion of an historical artefact, a child's shoe found at Auschwitz-Birkenau and then, through self-expression, the students are empowered to effect positive change through art.

Educational materials were created by Paul Salmons, Head of Curriculum Development, Holocaust Education Development Programme, Institute of Education, University of London.
