An Associated Press (AP) team of Ukrainian journalists trapped in the besieged city of Mariupol struggle to continue their work documenting the Russian invasion. As the only international reporters who remain in the city, they capture what later become defining images of the war: dying children, mass graves, the bombing of a maternity hospital, and more. The film draws on AP Journalist Mstyslav Chernov's daily news dispatches and personal footage of his own country at war. See More information here.

The film contains material that is disturbing, and not suitable for younger viewers. Viewer discretion is advised. A minimum age of 18 is recommended.
